Current Canadian Programs for Sheep

Darlene Jordan and Sharon Schaefer, Saskatchewan

Over the next couple of issues of "The Katahdin Hairald" we'll share information on current programs including identification, flock health, and food safety.

The Canadian Sheep Identification Program is a mandatory tagging system for all sheep or lambs leaving a farm. It was part of an industry-led initiative to eventually develop a trace back system to the flock of origin. As of January 1, 2004 all sheep and lambs must wear an approved CSIP ear tag before they leave the farm. The definition of 'leave the farm' has been determined as being sold or being on wheels. So any animal that goes to the vet or to a show or is trucked to a pasture must be tagged appropriately with the unique pre-numbered tag which has been purchased by the producer. At the moment only one tag is CSIP approved and these must be purchased from a single source. Producer's names, addresses, and phone numbers are kept by a central database with a record of the tag numbers they purchased. This file can only be accessed by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency in the event of a health or safety issue involving an animal. The similar Canadian Cattle Identification Program has been mandatory since 2001.

Complete information about each animal must be kept as a permanent record in the producer's files. Any animals purchased must already bear an approved CSIP tag and any animals losing tags must be immediately retagged, again with as much information as possible. Tags from dead sheep need to be kept with a record of the cause of death. Transporting or receiving untagged animals is illegal (federal Health of Animals Act) and

2004 KHSI Annual Meeting Updates

Les Jordan, Mississippi

Mark your calendar for October 7-9! We published other details in the last issue of the Hairald, but here are some important key points and updates. Registration forms will be available in August issue.

Speakers

We are excited to confirm that Charles Parker, PhD and Jim Miller, DVM, PhD will be speaking. Dr. Parker will continue to share his evolving insights about hair sheep and the sheep industry. Dr. Miller will be speaking on smart drenching for parasite control and FAMACHA (see article elsewhere in this issue). One breeder who has heard Dr. Miller's presentation said, "If you have lost sheep to parasites, Dr. Miller has information to help you prevent animal loss. His talk can help bridge the gap between selecting for more parasite resistance in your Katahdins and loss of effectiveness of wormers as the worms in our pastures acquire anthelmintic (wormer) resistance. Don't miss it! This talk was worth $1000 to my operation in 2 years."

Katahdins Taking a Lead in Parasite Resistance

KHSI will be the first Sheep Breed Association in North America to host two meetings with classes in FAMACHA. FAMACHA is an easy qualitative test developed in South Africa that can be used to evaluate level of parasitism by the barberpole worm, Haemonchus contortus. This worm is the major clinically important internal parasite in sheep in North America. Come to the KHSI Annual Meeting in McComb MS and get your FAMACHA card and use it to help with drenching decisions.

In 2003, Dr Tom Settlemire of Bowden College taught several KHSI members. This year, Dr Jim Miller of LSU (Louisiana State) Vet School will teach a course on October 8, 2004. For a qualitative measure, the FAMACHA chart is very effective at determining if an animal needs drenching. Effective use of the FAMACHA chart can help delay the buildup of wormer (anthelmintic) resistance in the parasite populations on your farm. Effective use of FAMACHA can save you money by a) decreasing the amount of drench you use, b) by decreasing lamb death and c) increasing growth rate by effective use of drenches.

Katahdins are also taking a lead by being the first breed in North America to actively select for sires that are parasite resistant in a multiple flock selection scheme. Contact Jim Morgan, 479-444-6075 or jimm@earthlink.net for more information.

Nominations for KHSI Board are Open!

We are seeking nominations for 2 KHSI Board positions. Service on the board provides opportunities to learn more about KHSI and Katahdins and to help promote and advance our very special breed! The board does most of its business by conference calls and email, and meets face to face at each KHSI annual meeting. If you are currently a KHSI inspector and would like to be considered as a nominee, or you know someone who would be a good candidate, please contact Nomination Chair Barbara Pugh at 919-542-4164 or bpugh1601@earthlink.net, Linda Neunzig at 360-435-9304 or ninetyfarms@aol.com or Operations at 479-444-8441 or khsint@earthlink.net no later than July 15. Ballots and bios will be included with the next Hairald.

in the early months of 2004 truckers, abattoirs, shows, etc. have been reminding clients by phone beforehand to have their animals tagged before they leave the farm. Imported sheep must have a CSIP approved tag applied within 7 days of arrival.

Another program available to producers is the Canadian Sheep & Lamb Food-Safe Farm Practices. It is a voluntary HAACP based approach to ensuring that the on-farm portion of food production is safe. Over the last several years different farm groups have been working together with government technical assistance in the Canadian On-Farm Food Safety Program and each commodity has developed its own Good Production Practices Manual. Training in the use of these good production practices and the record-keeping involved is now proceeding. Most of the practices are common-sense ones that the majority of producers already practice.

The above information was obtained through the Canadian Sheep Federation and the Saskatchewan Sheep Development Board.

An additional note: Our latest information is that USDA is treating sheep and lamb products more stringently than cervid (elk and deer) for whatever reason (science on both would indicate equal risk we're told). No lamb meat is crossing the border south except for New Zealand Lamb Co. which has obtained a special permit for offshore lamb processed here.

Future topics: we are doing our next article on an overall health state (livestock) and approach in Canada. We thought besides scrapie it would be useful to point out that Canada is bluetongue free and that we have a few other differences from US (or some states at least). We've collected data on a few points of interest and are waiting on latest from national scrapie committee.

Editor's Note: Darlene is KHSI's Canadian Representative. Sharon is past KHSI President and on the KHSI Breeder Education Committee. If you would like to join the committee, or if you have topics you would like to learn more about as a breeder, please drop a note to: khsint@earthlink.net

RR Ram to be Ruffled at Oct. KHSI Meeting

John Stromquist, Katahdin breeder from Illinois, has donated a Feb 2004 ram lamb that is RR at codon 171. This means that the ram is resistant to scrapie and that all lambs sired by him are resistant to scrapie. John has a good eye for sheep and you can count on this being a good ram. He judged sheep nationally for many years before retiring from raising Columbias and now raises Katahdins.

John donated the ram with the stipulation that all proceeds be used for promoting Katahdins in national & international sheep magazines. The winning raffle ticket will be drawn at the KHSI Annual Meeting in Mississippi October 9th. Tickets for the Ram Raffle will be inserted in the next Hairald. Tickets will cost $1.00 a piece, six for $5 or 12 for $10. You could be the owner of a quality Katahdin Ram by buying a raffle ticket! You don't need to be present to win, but we hope you will be attending all the great planned activities. KHSI looks forward to using this money to do additional promotion for all our Katahdins!

A Personal Plea

Carsten Pank, New York

By way of a recent questionnaire, the KHSI Showing Guidelines Committee wants to “determine a format for showing that will...also include meaningful performance data”. I believe it is naïve to think that “meaningful” performance data can be compatible with the show ring, since performance data compilations cannot be credible without credible absence of individual preferences.

“Unbiased” is the key word to the value of livestock performance data. Production records summary evaluations are unbiased when the breeder is surprised by which animals have higher and which have lower EPDs. As soon as an individual animal is eyed as a show prospect, it is given individual preference. At that point, “unbiased” is out, before any ill intentions might enter in. Of course, you and I are honest, but you and I must also be realists-any hint at bias makes production records suspect. An experienced breeder will always withhold credence from performance data of show animals.

Do shows “provide much needed breed promotion by getting quality animals out there to be seen”? The show ring is famous for promoting show quality, and it is infamous for demoting other qualities, such as: prolificacy-rate of gain-milk production-ease of birthing-mothering instincts-hardiness-alertness (to predators)-roughage conversion-longevity- and last not least, intestinal parasites tolerance. I did try to see sheep at a major show, the big E in Springfield, MA, and I did see a few sheep. Some had their heads tied on elevated grooming stands, others were very slowly pulled by the head around the show ring, or lined up so that a judge could squeeze them here or there. However, the vast majority of all the sheep at this show I could not see, because they were hidden under hooded blankets. Each year, Kay Cloyd and Ed Martsof have a booth with live Katahdins at the annual NAILE in Louisville, KY. This is a far better way to promote Katahdins; a much better way of “getting quality animals out there to be seen” –it is called exhibiting.

A farming injury had forced me to quit show jumping our hard-to-control stallion, but I could have continued breeding horses, which was then a sideline to our dairy operation. I gave it up also, because, over the years, I had grown sad and disgusted, while I had to witness how the show ring was ruining the Morgan horse breed. I need not describe here, how the show ring has split breed organizations – except to say that KHSI could become endangered if the show issue gets pushed too far.

Whether they own one or not, all shepherds know what kind of dog the Border Collie is. Any serious breeder or trainer of Border Collies would laugh at the suggestion to enter a Border Collie in a dog show beauty contest. Many dog breeds are well suited for the show ring, and so are many sheep

Scrapie Confirmed in a Grade Hair Sheep

Jim Morgan, KHSI Operations Office

A recent telephone conversation with Dr. Diane Sutton confirmed a case of scrapie in a grade hair sheep in the USA. Dr. Sutton is the National Scrapie Program Coordinator with the National Animal Health Program (USDA-APHIS) that is working to control and eradicate scrapie in the United States.

In the past, a few hair sheep breeders have suggested that scrapie control regulations should not apply to hair sheep. Since there had been no documented cases of scrapie in hair sheep, some breeders claimed they must be resistant. We wanted to make sure that Katahdin breeders were aware of the confirmed presence of scrapie in hair sheep. Supporting this evidence are codon 171 testing results in Katahdins and other hair sheep. There are significant percentages of hair sheep with the scrapie susceptible QQ genotype at codon 171. All evidence suggests that these sheep are susceptible to scrapie.

Dr. Sutton also said that research has found that 1 in 100 Suffolk has scrapie and that the average for the USA is 1 in 500 sheep is infected with scrapie. With scrapie being this common and the number of Katahdins increasing quickly, it may just be a matter of time, before there is a confirmed case of scrapie in the Katahdin breed. Note that with the vast majority of sheep being slaughtered at less than 2 years of age, most scrapie infected sheep would never exhibit symptoms.

Since 1 in every 500 sheep in the USA has scrapie, it is important for Katahdin breeders to be careful about bringing new animals into their flocks. The scrapie prevention policies needed by a shepherd depend on her/his buying and selling practices. Those breeders who buy and sell numerous sheep in non-slaughter channels (especially ewes and ewe lambs) are more at risk for having scrapie in their flock or being quarantined by State Animal Health Offices and the USDA-

PROLIFIC FLOCK BRED TO TOP MILKING KATAHDIN RAM!

PROLIFIC FLOCK

Our Mature Ewes lambed at 250% this year. In a previous year, our mature ewes lambed at 270%. Many of our ewes annually rank near the top for the % Lamb Crop EPD (expected progeny difference) and were bred to the top-ranked milking Katahdin Ram FAH1016. The genetic potential for milk production and prolificacy was evaluated by the National Sheep Improvement Program.

The rest of our ewes were bred to sires selected for superior growth as identified by the National Sheep Improvement Program. One of these sires was our top ram lamb for the 2003 summer crop for three consecutive fecal egg counts from June to September. The third sire was bred by Mark Dennis of Louisiana. We are selling lambs out of these rams as well. Buy stock that are performance evaluated and superior for growth, prolificacy, parasite resistance and/or milk!!

APHIS office since they may have "bought from or sold to" a flock with scrapie.

A breeder can decrease their risk of scrapie or a scrapie quarantine by one or more of the following: a) not buying ewes, b) buying and selling only animals genotyped RR or QR at codon 171 c) buying from flocks in the SFCP or other National or Provincial Health Programs that help minimize scrapie risk d) knowing where your purchased animals come from and the health policies of those flocks, e) culling all animals that are QQ at codon 171 f) using RR or QR breeding rams, g) selling all QQ animals straight to a slaughter facility. Depending on their scrapie risk, each breeder will need to make their own decisions about which (if any) and how many of these options they choose.

breeds, including hair sheep breeds. Why can't the Katahdin be an outstanding (pun intended) easy performance breed?

I believe that those who want to breed sheep for the show ring are well advised to prefer a more suitable breed over Katahdins. Indeed, I beg those who like to pursue sheep breeding as a competitive sport to please select another breed—please do not contribute to harming of the Katahdin breed by the show ring.
